Note: The institution considers an on-time graduate to be a student who completes their program within the specified timeframe (in months). Four weeks of instructional time equals one month of program length.

The published length of each program can be found in the applicable catalog. The published length may not include scheduled breaks or the time required to complete clinical or externship requirements due to the inherent nature of these courses. Therefore, the calculation used to determine the rates accounts for normal lengths of time associated with the curriculum that extend the period longer than the actual course of time.

Per federal regulations, any program that graduated less than 10 students has been excluded from this disclosure.

Median Loan Debt is the middle loan amount, extracted from a range of students who have graduated from a particular program, and only includes debt incurred at the institution. The debt incurred includes living expenses. Students are arranged in ascending order, including students who have zero debt. Therefore, it is possible to have programs with a median loan debt amount of zero.
